Mardi Gras was initially a protest against discrimination and oppression. It encountered cruel police brutalities. It could be a celebration but it should never be merely a celebration. Our fight against oppression and exploitation is going on and we are to reclaim the name of Mardi Gras from those traitors with corporate power. We have a world to win.

I am an international law student and was a queer activist in China. I was involved with the Renmin University of China Sex and Gender Study Community and served as its Vice President, actively promoting discussions on gender equality issues and queer rights on campus. I took office as Vice President during a tumultuous time and I was inspired by workers who demanded to organise an independent union but were suppressed and, were arbitrarily detained alongside their student supporters due to massive abuses of police powers. I had to deal with the blatant hostility of the university authorities against student activism and the discrimination against the queer community, our members and our association. In Sydney, I helped mobilise and build up support among students and stood at the every single picket line for the University of Sydney staff strike this year.

A vote for me and Pride in Protest is a vote for militancy and resistance of the queer community!

Pride in Protest Statement

As queer activists, we refute the assertion that placement on the Mardi Gras board should be meritocratic and based on presumed qualifications. We are appropriate for a role on the board on the basis that we are queer people, engaging with the queer community, and engaged in struggles for social justice.

We strongly recommend that Mardi Gras members vote for the following candidates in the following order:

1. Skip Blofield
2. Mikhael Burnard
3. Levi Hu
4. Rachel Evans
